CSC Kisan e-Mart: Helping farmers sell their produce directly through CSC

CSC Kisan e-Mart is a unique platform to help farmers sell their produce through CSC.

VLEs are working as facilitator in this model. VLE will on-board farmers on "CSC Kisan e-Mart" portal along with farmers' KYC details and also add stock of farmers for selling. Farmers can sell their produce direct, on portal through bid process.

VLE will get commission on adding verified stock and farmers on portal.

Farmer will get their sold produce amount in his Bank account.

This project is currently being run as a pilot project starting with 5 districts (Pune, Nashik, Satara, Solapur and Jalna) of Maharashtra.

Indians flock for online medical advice to beat coronavirus lockdown blues

Two days after the national lockdown was announced by Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Rasheed Begum, a 62-year-old resident of Jhabua, an interior village in the hinterland of Central India, started feeling unwell.

Having undergone a heart surgery a few months ago, she didn’t want to travel to the nearest hospital around 46km away. Her worries were accentuated by the ongoing coronavirus pandemic as the aged are more vulnerable and are advised not to go out.

The next thing she did was to go to a village-level common services centre run by the telecommunication department of the Indian government, equipped with high-speed internet and cameras. She consulted her doctor on her health issues and was given medicines using telemedicine facility.

With the lockdown, Indians are reaching out to doctors over the mildest symptoms using tele-consultations offered by hospitals. Telemedicine is the most transformative change Indian hospitals have made to provide healthcare services in the post-coronavirus disease (Covid-19). Accessibility has been a perennial problem of the Indian healthcare sector.

According to a report by the Centre for Disease Dynamics, Economics and Policy (CDDEP) in the US, India has a shortage of around six million doctors and two million nurses. On March 26 2020, India's health ministry issued telemedicine guidelines enabling doctors to write prescriptions based on telephone conversations that reduce risks of transmission for medical professionals as well as patients. It also reduces the inconvenience to families, caregivers and social sectors.

"We have seen spike of over 10 times and more than 30,000 citizens across the country have benefitted during the month of April, 2020, lockdown period", says Dinesh Tyagi, Chief Executive Officer of CSC e-Governance Services company promoted by Indian government.

"Prior to the lockdown, we had an average of 200-300 telemedicine consultations by 30 doctors of different specialisations daily, resulting in more than 6,000 calls monthly," he added.

With India’s public health expenditure just 1.28% of its GDP, there is a persistent shortage of doctors, health workers and hospital beds in the country, especially in rural areas and densely-populated under-developed states.

How mango farmers are adapting CSC Grameen eStore under coronavirus lockdown

Villagers are ordering mangoes and lichi directly from the farm - a trend small-scale producers hope will outlast the pandemic.

It could be one of the few economic upsides to a crisis that has emptied felled business as Indian lockdown against the fast-spreading novel coronavirus.

In Gujarat, Maharashtra, Jharkhand, Madhya Pradesh, a farmers' collective said with the help of CSC Grameen eStore, they are making thousands of rupees a week in a season when sales are normally zero.

Devgad is a taluka in Sindhudurg district of Maharashtra consisting of 98 villages. It is located on the Arabian Sea in the coastal Konkan region of Maharashtra. Devgad is known globally for its exports of locally grown Alphonso mangoes. In Devgad CSC VLE Raj Teli is delivering Alphanso mangoes at doorsteps using CSC Grameen e-Store.

VLE Rajni Sodera is delivering Lichi in Jamshedpur using CSC Grameen eStore.

In this holy month of Ramzan, villagers are getting help from CSC e-store. CSC VLE Mo. Azad Patel of Gram panchayat Umaria, Ujjain district (Madhya Pradesh) is providing mangoes and other fruits/vegetables through CSC Grameen e-store. The special thing is that it is the month of Ramadan and at this time Muslim society needs fruits for Iftari in the evening. Sharmila B, a resident of Umaria Panchayat, said that due to CSC, she is no longer facing problems for fruits and other necessities for Iftar, she thanked to the entire CSC family.

By selling to people instead of main market, farmers said revenues are close to an all-time high. Consumers are adopting online ordering and home delivery through CSC Grameen eStore, transforming old-fashioned farms into consumer-friendly outlets.

"In two or three weeks we accelerated like five to ten years of growth and change in the industry," said farmer Sudhir from Devgad, Maharashtra.
"I think we are getting a lot of new people into local produce that have never tried buying from their local farmer before." Eating local is lauded as a way to reduce the greenhouse gas emissions of transporting food long distances.

Growers across the country are vulnerable to economic shocks right now because of labour shortages, supply chain disruptions and fluctuating prices linked to the pandemic, farmers in Maharashtra and Gujarat said.

"The beauty of the CSC Grameen app is it allows a farmer to capture the value of their product at a near-to-retail price with the help of VLEs, and so it's a really attractive option economically for a farmer," they said.
